

Prior law provided that the database of the Board of Ethics's Computerized Data Management System is to be categorized so as to provide for citizens' access of all reports filed with the board.

New law retains prior law, and further provides that this access is to include the ability of the public to search the system's database of campaign finance disclosure reports by contributor names.

New law further provides that names in electronically filed gubernatorial transition and inauguration reports, which reports are provided for by prior law, are to be accessible via public search by contributor's name.

New law further requires that a person viewing reports filed electronically by a candidate be provided with a link to all campaign contribution disclosure reports filed pursuant to prior law by a candidate who is an agency head or appointee to a state board.

Effective June 30, 2010.
